

Andreas Laffert

Research Profile

Sociologist from the University of Chile with an M.A. in Sociology from the Pontifical Catholic University of Chile. I currently serve as a research assistant on Fondecyt Project No. 1250518 “Market Justice and the Deservingness of Social Welfare,” and on the Chilean partner team of Wealth and Social Cohesion from a Relational Perspective (WESOREL). In addition, I serve as research coordinator at the Inequality Observatory of the Diego Portales University. My research focuses on social stratification, social mobility, wealth, and public attitudes toward the marketization of social services, using quantitative methods that combine observational data, causal inference, and survey experiments.
